High Success on Bear

Once again Cinder River Lodge proves to be the ultimate destination for trophy brown bears. Our 2007 bear season was a huge success with 86% of our fall bear hunters going home with a trophy class brown bear. All of our hunters had a good opportunity to take nice brown bear again this year. Brad Wall of Hooter's Bass Fishing fulfilled a lifetime dream with this nice 9 foot class brownie, as did Carroll Moran (below) who took a great bear on the 5th day of his hunt. Everyone dealt with a lot of high wind, rain and even snow showers this fall on the Alaska Peninsula, but we ended our thirty-sixth safe and successful brown bear season with several excellent trophies this year, thanks to a great bunch of hunters and a lot of hard work by our professional guides, pilots and entire crew at Cinder River Lodge.

Another One Day Bear Hunt

After several unsuccessful attempts at a Kodiak Permit, Steve Whistler booked a last minute opening with Cinder River Lodge in hopes of taking a record class Alaska Brown Bear. Due to a family emergency, Steve arrived late with only six days left in the season, but was certainly not disappointed after taking a monstrous 10'-4" bruin on his first day of hunting in the vast, exclusive Aniakchak National Preserve guiding concession operated by Cinder River Lodge. They don't all come this easy, but when opportunity knocks, you had better answer the door. Another Outstanding Trophy!

Dwayne does it again!

After taking a monster Boone and Crockett record book moose last September, Dwayne Heikes of Portland, Oregon, returned to Cinder River Lodge in October of 2007 with hopes and dreams of a big Alaska brown bear.

After passing on several smaller bear early in his hunt, and then beginning to question his decision, Dwayne was eventually rewarded on the seventh day of his ten day hunt. His dreams were more than fulfilled when he scored on this huge 10'-3" brown bear with a 28 inch record book skull. The long tradition of successful hunts for huge Alaska Brown Bear at Cinder River Lodge continues.

Moose Season Short but Sweet

The eleven day September moose season on the Alaska Peninsula once again turned out to be a huge success for Cinder River Lodge. Dave Salopek from Las Cruces, New Mexico, was the lucky hunter to take the largest bull out of the camp this season.

Dave's huge bull was 69 inches with massive palms and great points all around.

Dave and three others family members from Las Cruces, booked their moose hunt several year ago and were all successful this year taking trophy class bull moose with the guides and pilots at Cinder River Lodge.

Cinder River Lodge

Cinder River Lodge is located about midway down the Alaska Peninsula. Our hunting area includes a large exclusive hunting concession in the Aniakchak National Park/Preserve, which was just renewed in 2005 for another ten year term. We also have several camps on the adjacent lands managed by the State of Alaska Department of Natural Resources. This huge hunting area stretches from Bristol Bay to the Pacific Ocean and includes nearly 2,000 square miles of trophy moose and brown bear habitat. The terrain varies from coastal beaches to brushy lowlands, hills and the alpine Aleutian Mountains which separate the Bristol Bay side from the Pacific side of the Alaska Peninsula. We base two aircraft at the lodge during the hunting season. Our facilities include a hunter's bunkhouse, shower house and the main lodge with a kitchen / dining area, living room and two small guest rooms for couples and some of our crew. The lodge has running water and generated electrical power. At Cinder River Lodge, you will enjoy delicious family style meals. In spike camps, our hunters eat whole foods, rather than freeze dried which is too often served on Alaska hunts. All of the food, supplies and camp gear are provided for your hunt. Clients need only bring their favorite rifle (30 caliber magnum or larger), ammunition, personal clothing, footwear and a good quality sleeping bag. The experienced bush pilots at Cinder River Lodge will fly each hunter and his guide from the lodge to their own private spike camp, to hunt for the trophy desired. All hunts are fair-chase. Camps are checked often by: radio, satellite telephone or our lodge aircraft. Cinder River Lodge employs only licensed professional guides, trained in First Aid and experienced in the situations that arise in the field such as: judging trophies, skinning, butchering and fleshing. Our professional guides will see to the care of your trophy as well as all of the other necessary duties on the hunt and around spike camp.
